

ROBISCHON

Many years ago Sarasota's pioneer settlers realized that at least once each year those so unfortunate as not to live here should be invited to view the cities charms in a quaint manner. It is an annual celebration when citizens and visitors alike don Spanish costumes and mingle in festive atmosphere.

Photo by Lewis-Moore, Sarasota, Florida

this postcard reminded me that maybe you were right all along, that we can never predict what it is we will believe is important even two days from now, that somehow distance will correct what time cannot, and that we remain forever trapped somewhere between thought and action.

PUBLISHED BY MARTIN LING SALES CO., BOX 497, LARGO, FLORIDA

POST CARD

FOUND NARRATIVE #19